CAPITALISM DYING, EUROPE NEAR CRASH, KRASSIN DECLARES

Soviet Envoy to London Outlines Russian Policy Before Departing for Moscow and Genoa—Communists Do Not Dream of Restoring "Anarchy of Capitalist Production"

The following article by Joseph Krassin, chief of the Soviet delegation in London and one of the leading figures of the Moscow movement, was written just prior to his departure from the British capital for Moscow, where he will be in charge of the Soviet mission to the Chamberlain conference and bring the Soviets into close contact with the British.

"The economic situation of Europe's trade union, financial institutions and all the regions that capitalism has created is mortal today and was never more in previous eras and periods."

"If you look for signs of any great progress, the maintenance of the discipline of the production."

"It is the duty of entering the economy of capitalist production."

BY LEONARD KRAMER.
